Name of the game

Krolf is a cross-over between croquet and golf.

It's called croquet in English and 'kroket' in Danish, so it should have been Crolf in English, but there's at least one other - and older - game in the USA also called Crolf, and in the UK a guy has invented another Crolf game - younger than ours - so to keep a little distance to those games, we call our game Krolf with a K.

The purpose of the game

The purpose of the game is to get the ball into the hole in fewest possible strokes. It can be played by 2 to 6 players, and the winner is the player with fewest strokes.

The course

§ 1 Course

A Krolf course contains 12 holes. The distance from the starting point to the hole must be minimum 5 meters and a recommended 30-meter maximum.

It is not a requirement that a hole-in-one should be possible on every hole.

§ 2 Hole markers

The holes must be clearly marked with a number sign in or behind the hole.

§ 3 Holes

A hole must be 10.3 cm minimum and a recommended 15 cm maximum in inner diameter and be at least 3 cm deep at its deepest.

Alternative hole variations are permitted in indoor Krolf.

§ 4 Obstacles

Fallen leaves, branches and sticks, small pebbles, tufts of grass and other miscellaneous loose objects may be removed. Hole markers, flags and permanent obstacles may not be moved.

Permanent obstacles must be grounded well enough, so they don't move when they are struck by the ball.

If an obstacle moves despite being fixed, it must be put back in place immediately. It is the judge who assesses whether the player gets a new stroke or not if an obstacle has changed.

Lids from holes and tufts of grass are loose objects and does not belong on the course unless they are attached to the ground.

If an obstacle moves despite the attachment, it should be placed back in its original spot immediately. If the ball was the reason behind the moving obstacle then the stroke must be replayed, if not then the referee will decide if the stroke should be replayed or not.

Round lids may well be fastened in the center, although they may rotate around the center.

If a person or an animal changes the ball's direction, then the stroke should be replayed.

If it was another players fault, then the referee can issue a fitting penalty, if it was deemed to be done on purpose.

It is forbidden to stamp the ground with either foot or mallet with the purpose to change the layout of the course or to get the ball into the hole. However, it is permitted to "groom" tall grass with your fingers, but not permitted to tear it.

If one or more balls move during the removal of sticks or tall grass etc., then the referee puts the balls back in their original spot. This is considered accidental and no penalty is issued.

The ball may be moved up to 15 cm away from an obstacle—measured from the part of the ball that is nearest the obstacle or the edge of the course. It may not be moved directly into the hole and there must be at least 6 cm to the nearest ball. The cost is 1 stroke.

If the ball has been moved when hit by another player's ball and the referee judges the ball to be unplayable, then the ball may be moved 15 cm away from the obstacles without a penalty.

If the ball goes into a wrong Krolf hole, then it's free to move the ball up to the edge of the hole. Various other holes in the course is to be considered as obstacles.

§ 5 Starting point

If a hole's starting point is marked with a line or 2 marks, then these must be respected.

If there is only 1 start mark, then the ball should be placed within 85 cm of each side of this mark. The ball may not be placed in front of the mark.

If there is no start marking, the previous hole's number marking applies as 1 start marking.

It is not allowed to use a tee or similar.

The line cannot be overstepped by the player's feet – only the ball can be misplaced this way.

§ 6 The course's boundary

Any part of the course should be within the following 3 definitions:

In:

Defined as the area where the ball may NOT be moved by hand unless it's near an obstacle (see §4 Obstacles).

Out:

Defined as the area where the ball MUST be moved onto the course by hand.

Optional area:

Defined as the area where the player can choose whether to play the ball or move it to an area designated as "in". It is always penalized with 1 stroke when the ball is moved from an optional area, even if another player hit the ball into the optional area.

Equipment

§ 7 Mallets

Only mallets where it is obvious for anyone what the head is and what the shaft is may be used.

Any mechanical contraptions controlling strength or direction are illegal.

The mallet may be substituted once per match.

If the mallet is defective, then it may always be substituted.

§ 8 Balls

A Krolf ball must be a minimum of 78 mm and a maximum of 90 mm in diameters with a minimum weight of 200 g. There is no maximum weight or rules with regards to the material.

The ball may be substituted once per match but only after a hole is completed.

If the ball is defective, then it may always be substituted.

Alternative balls are allowed when playing indoor Krolf.

Referee

§ 9 Referee

Before the match begin a referee is appointed. The referee may be one of the players.

The role of the referee:

To control the scoreboard (first name/last name, club and ball color).

To mention the players name when the stroke can be performed.

To count the number of strokes.

To supervise when balls are moved (obstacles, out of bounds, wrong ball and such).

The referee has the final say.

The referee should not say the name of the next player until he/she is ready.

If the referee dictates an incorrect name and the player strikes the ball, then the balls should be moved back to where they came from without penalty.

The strokes are added together and the players number of strokes on the hole is mentioned, e.g.: "Anders, 4".

To keep check on which balls are hit during the strokes.

Check if the ball is completely immobile before mentioning the next player name, especially if it's near the edge of the hole.

The players can check the scoreboard at any time.

To get eager players to wait until it's their turn.

Explanation of the course (Definition of obstacles, out of bounds etc.).

Strokes

Make a line for each stroke in the left column.

Add the strokes together in the right column after each hole.

Tips and guidance

A player may receive tips and guidance from anyone.

The referee may only guide regarding the rules.

Go forward

Make sure the players don't go forward until everyone has played the ball. It can be distracting for the other players if this rule is not enforced.

Punishment may occur, but the order is first warning, and in case of repeated offenses, then possibly punishing strokes.

§ 10 Giving permission to strike the ball

No player may hit the ball before the referee has given permission. If it happens anyway, then it's a 1 stroke penalty.

The referee gives permission to play the ball, when it's determined that the hole is empty, no balls are moving, and the scoreboard has been updated.

The referee gives permission by saying the next players name (see §9 "The role of the referee").

The game

§ 11 General rules

Before the game starts a starting order must be agreed upon or drawn at random. Rolling start is used, which means that the players take turns being the first player on each hole. A permanent starting order may also be kept through the whole game.

§ 12 Strokes

The mallet head must touch the ball for a stroke to be correct.

A stroke is when the mallet and ball have had contact. This does not apply for the first stroke if the ball does not cross the starting point. It is neither a stroke if the referee deems the contact accidental.

§ 13 Ball in the hole

The ball is only in the hole when it lies still at the bottom of the hole or resting on a ball touching the bottom.

When playing indoor Krolf, the ball does not necessarily touch the bottom.

§ 14 Foul ball

If a player strikes a wrong ball, then it counts as a stroke, but all balls are moved back to their original places. The player may then not hit his/her own ball.

If a player strikes before his/her turn, then all balls are moved back to their original places. The player is noted for a stroke when it's his/her turn again but may not strike the ball.

Pushed ball or double strokes are not allowed. All implicated balls are moved back, and the player is noted for a stroke.

It is not allowed for the ball to touch the shaft of the players mallet, a body part or piece of clothing on your person. All implicated balls are moved back, and the player is noted for a stroke.

Indirect strokes are illegal. An indirect stroke is defined by the ball moving even though it wasn't hit by the mallet.

§ 15 Hole-in-one

If a player gets the ball in the hole in the first stroke, then it's called a hole-in-one, which counts for 0 strokes on the scoreboard.

It is not a hole-in-one if the player retries the hole or if the next player has hit their ball in the meantime.

§ 16 Out of bounds

If a player has played his or her ball out of bounds, then there is a penalty of 1 stroke in order to move the ball into an area defined as "on the course". The ball is moved onto the course where it went out of bounds and not the shortest way in.

The ball may not be moved until it's the players turn again. The ball is moved by the player, but it's controlled by the referee.

When the ball is moved unto the course it must be placed in a spot where the player can hit the ball. There must be at least 6 cm to the nearest ball and 15 cm to out of bounds. If the player has played the ball out of bounds him/herself, then the ball must be places at least 1 meter from the hole.

If somebody else has played the ball to "out", then there is no penalty for moving back to "in". The ball is moved to its original position keeping a minimum distance to other players balls of at least 6 cm.

If others have shot the ball into the "optional area", it is NOT free to move to "in".

The ball has to be placed so it is of the least possible inconvenience of other players.

If a ball was on the edge of out of bounds and rolls out after the referee has allowed next player to continue, then there's no penalty.

If the player played his/her own ball out of bounds, then there's a 1 stroke penalty for moving the ball onto a part of the course defined as "in". The ball is moved to the place it went out of bounds and not the shortest way back.

The ball can only be "out" of bounds if it got no contact to the edge of the grass or line.

§ 17 Replays

If a player somehow is positioned unplayable, then it's possible to replay the ball from the starting point.

You can always choose to start over on a hole. This cost an extra 1 stroke. The player is noted for a stroke when the ball is moved back to the starting spot and is not allowed to play until his/her next turn.

If the ball disappears, then the player MUST replay the hole and be penalized with 1 stroke.

§ 18 Maximum strokes

It is not allowed to play beyond the 8th stroke. If the ball is not in the hole when the 9th stroke is to be played, then the player is noted for 10 strokes and the ball is removed from the course.

§ 19 Misconduct

All sporting misconducts can give warnings, extra strokes or disqualification depending on the degree of the misconduct.
